

Setting Your Cookidoo Profile and Filters

By default, when you search for recipes in Cookidoo, you will be shown recipes that were developed specifically for your own country. While this might be appropriate for you, if you want to be more adventurous you can set Cookidoo to find recipes from a set of countries, or recipes in certain languages, etc.

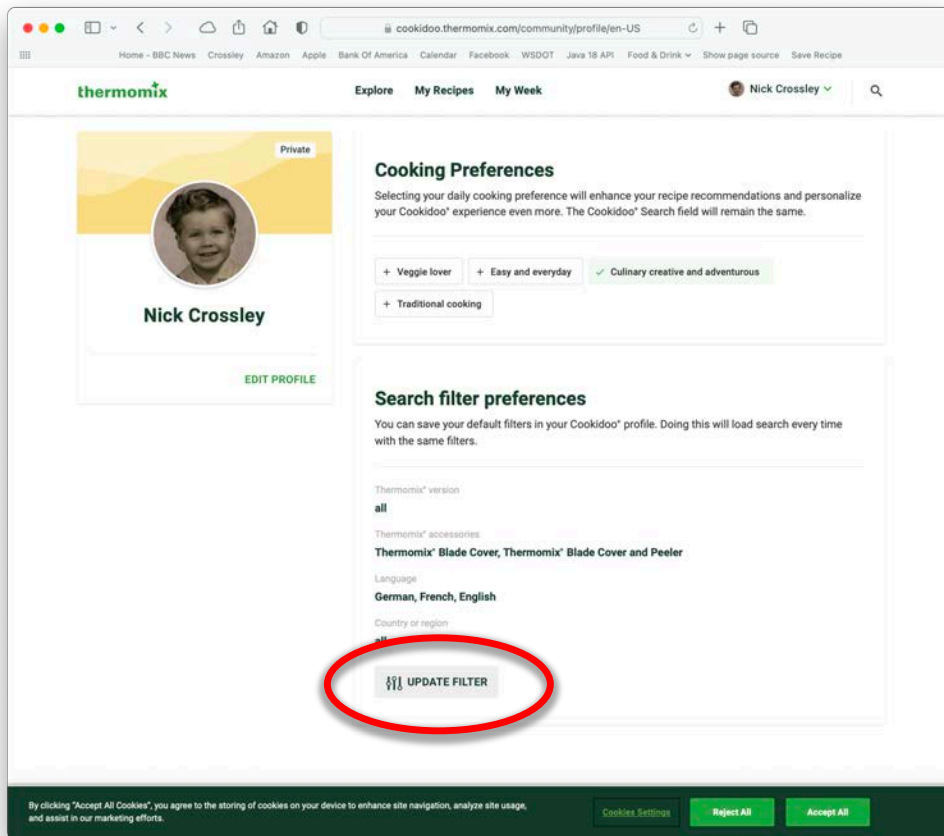

To change the recipe filtering, open up Cookidoo in a browser or in the mobile app:

At the top right is your account link (it is the small photo on the mobile app); click on that to bring up a menu:

Click on View profile (web) or Preferences (app), and it opens the Profile page:

The top part of your profile page on the web allows you to upload a small picture or icon representing you – fun, and useful if you have more than one Cookidoo account. In the app, do this by clicking on the pencil at the top right.

Your profile/preference page allows you to set your Cooking Preferences. Doing so has no effect on your Cookidoo searches, but does change the content on your home page in Cookidoo, recommending recipes or collections reflecting your chosen style.

The lower part is where your default filters are shown – the filters in the example profile above will find recipes in either English or French, from any country.

Click on Update Filter to change your default filters. If you leave a filter section all unchecked, that means no filter will be applied¹ – so in the example below, Cookidoo will not filter on the Thermomix version, but will show recipes for any/all versions of the Thermomix. The same is true of the country or region – and I highly recommend that you deselect all countries and allow Cookidoo to find recipes from anywhere.

¹ The Thermomix accessories section is an exception to this rule: search results exclude accessories that are not checked in this section – and can optionally be limited to including only recipes using those accessories. I recommend you select exactly the set of accessories you have, if any.

You probably do want to limit the searches to languages that you can read – though remember that your browser and your phone can translate any web page or screen, so you can in fact cook using the entire Cookidoo library (over 90,000 recipes as of January 2023!)
